

The cold winter settles on our winery and the snowed Andes Mountains make a perfect view of our vineyards.

We invite you to read the latest news on what is going on in the winery this 2016 winter.

We were granted the Organic official certifications for our vineyards and winery. Letis was the firm that audited us in order to successfully achieve these important certifications.

“An ‘organic’ product is one coming from a sustainable production system, which, through the rational management of natural resources and without the use of synthetic chemical products, provides healthy and abundant food, while allowing the maintenance or increase of the fertility of the natural resource, its biotic activity and biodiversity” according to Letis.org website.

These organic certifications are a very important accomplishment for us, since they formalize our efforts to have work practices that respect nature, our vineyards and our grapes, in order to make better wines every day.

Altos Las Hormigas is now part of PIPA - Productores Independientes de Paraje Altamira (Independent Producers from Paraje Altamira), an association created in Argentina to better communicate the unique characteristics of the Terroir in the area of Altamira, Uco Valley. As a part of our Terroir Project, the team of ants has conducted studies in this region that have led to a clear understanding of the vineyard-Terroir relation. These concepts are the fundamentals to make wines that draw their complexity and character from their origin, and not from the winemaking style.

Our Malbec Clasico 2015 vintage is available!

Product of an early harvest, in a vintage marked by very high temperatures, this Malbec shows the joyful and fresh expression of Mendoza's flag variety. It presents notes of red fruits, cherries and a soft note of plums that have just been picked up from the tree. The palate is supple and juicy, inviting to enjoy glass after glass, with soft but structured tannins and a pleasant finish. Three words can describe this Malbec perfectly: freshness, joy and vitality.

The American wine journalist James Suckling has published his 2016 Argentina Report, entitled "The Pleasure of Argentina", featuring some remarkable points to our wines. The highlight: 93 points to our Altos Las Hormigas Malbec Appellation Altamira 2014.

We have also received great scores from Sommelier Markus Del Monego, DJ Kearney writing for Canada's Wine Align and the Argentinean wine journalist Fabricio Portelli. Check out all the latest ratings in the HOT NEWS section of our website, clicking here.
